"Enlarge, Enliven, Enlighten!" is the battle cry of the exuberantly bizarre and brazenly unique Lettice Douffet. Such is the mantra of Sir Peter Shaffer's delightful play, Lettice and Lovage. This charming and hilarious British comedy won Tony Awards in 1990 for its lead actors and a nomination for Best Play.

About the Play: What happens when an eccentric tour guide is assigned to the dulllest house in England? After watching her groups dwindle with boredom, she begins to elaborate. As she adds wildly dramatic tales of murder and intrigue, she begins to receive ovations from her increasing audiences. Her success is cut short when the formidable head of the Preservation Trust shows up.

The Story: Lettice Douffet (Lorraine Bahr), an expert on medieval cuisine and weaponry, is a tour guide of Fustian House, the most boring stately home in Britain — until she begins to embellish her tours, which become more interesting as they stray further from the facts. Charlotte "Lotte" Schoen (MaryAnne Glazebrook), sent by the Preservation Trust to investigate, is not amused and fires her. But Charlotte's passion for history draws her to Lettice's romantic world-view and the two women forge an unlikely friendship in the face of their dreary modern lives and hilarity ensues. Others in the cast include Rosalind Fell, John Morrison, Nathan Markiewicz, Clara-Liis Hillier and Steve Black.
